

Supply from Portuguese optical cable manufacturer

AI Overview

Portugal hosts several reputable optical cable manufacturers, including Tratos Group, FastFiber, CABLOTEC, and Prysmian, offering direct supply options for fiber optic and structured cabling solutions. Key Manufacturers and Suppliers

Tratos Group is a leading European fiber optic cable manufacturer with over 40 years of experience. They produce versatile optical cables, including low smoke, zero halogen, and fire-resistant options suitable for high-speed broadband and FTTH installations. Tratos also offers microcables and pre-connectorized solutions for both residential and commercial applications, making them a strong candidate for direct supply agreements.

FastFiber operates as a major fiber optic wholesale operator in Portugal, providing FTTH access, dark fiber point-to-point connections, and structured cabling products. They focus on innovation and quality, offering copper and fiber optic systems, racks, and cabinets, which can be directly sourced for large-scale network deployments.

CABLOTEC Cablagens e Sistemas Lda. specializes in connectivity solutions across multiple industries, including telecommunications. They provide custom prototyping and development services, which is useful for specialized fiber optic applications requiring tailored solutions.

Prysmian Group is a global leader in cable manufacturing with a strong presence in Portugal. They offer a wide range of telecom cables and systems, including optical fiber solutions, and maintain robust R&D capabilities to support innovative network deployments.
